

Scientists Are Cracking the Code of Lovemaking Hormone balance and Attraction

We have long used the word chemistry to describe how well two people get along in the wild world of relationship. Little did we know how accurate the use of that word was. Scientists are now making daily advances as they work on cracking the code of sexual chemistry and attraction. A few of the latest findings and products created based on them are astonishing.

Recent findings indicate which human beings produce very powerful toxic chemicals known as pheromones. The chemical tricksters can not be seen, sensed, or sampled, heard, or smelled, yet they have the power to get people to react using some techniques. There is a small organ inside the nose that has, until recently, not been found in order to serve any useful purpose. This organ, called the vomeronasal organ, has been shown to process pheromones and stimulate the limbic region of the brain, producing specific emotional and also physical responses. This particular discovery by scientists has helped in discovering the code of sexual chemistry and attraction.

Dr. Virgil Amend has been studying the effects of human pheromones for several years. This individual recently introduced a topical mixture of human pheromones for guys that have been proven to have very powerful effects on women. Using this mixture of pheromones increases the sexual attraction females feel toward a man by a few levels, making it more likely that they will respond favourably in order to his attention.

Has been suggested that one of the many reasons men and women do not have as much biochemistry between them as they once seemed to, is many of the pheromones that are normally produced in the body are washed away by frequent showering or overpowered by scented soaps and laundry detergents, perfumes, and colognes. These types of substances appear to cover up normal levels of pheromones.
